November 10, 2010

Engr. Ermie M. Bacarra
Chief, HRIDD
PCASTRD, DOST

Dear Engr. Bacarra,

I am strongly endorsing the application of Prof. Wendell Q. Campano in the PhD (Statistics) scholarship of PCASTRD. He worked under my supervision for his MS thesis on robust estimation procedures in time series models. A paper we co-authored entitled Robust Estimation of A Time Series Model with Structural Change is now forthcoming in the Journal of Computational Statistics and Simulation, an ISI-Indexed journal. I believe he is capable of completing the PhD program within the timelines set in our curriculum.

Prof. Campano was hired as Instructor in the School of Statistics in June 2006 and soon after he completed the MS program in 2008 was promoted as Assistant Professor. Currently, we are waiting for the final printed copy of the above paper to award Prof. Campano his tenure to the University. The expertise that Prof. Campano will achieve in the PhD program will have a significant impact in asserting the expertise of the School of Statistics in the area of computational statistics that we are now generating recognition in the international community. His possible work in statistical theory (volatility in time series) will have potential applications in the analysis of weather anomalies related to the issue of climate change.

I don't know of any criminal/administrative charges against Prof. Campano. The School of Statistics is also willing to release him from duties and responsibilities, in fact, we already allowed him to go on leave with pay since June 2010.

Sincerely Yours,

Dean

PCASTRD, DOST

Dear Engr. Bacarra,

It is my pleasure to recommend Prof. Wendell Q. Campano in the PhD (Statistics) scholarship of PCASTRD. He worked under my supervision for his MS thesis on robust estimation procedures in time series models. I believe that there are still many open problems left after his thesis that he can work on for his PhD dissertation later. Part of his thesis was presented at the Joint Meeting of the 4th World Conference of the International Association for Statistical Computing (IASC) and the 6th Conference of the Asian Regional Section of the IASC on Computational Statistics and Data Analysis on December 5-8, 2008 in Yokohama, Japan, an important meeting of computational statisticians in the world. Also, a paper we co-authored entitled Robust Estimation of A Time Series Model with Structural Change is now forthcoming in the Journal of Computational Statistics and Simulation, an ISI-Indexed journal. I believe he is capable of completing the PhD program within the timelines set in our curriculum.

As the head of sending institution, the expertise that Prof. Campano will achieve in the PhD program will have a significant impact in asserting the expertise of the School of Statistics in the area of computational statistics that we are now generating recognition in the international community. I will advise him to take cognates in computer science to further develop the methods we have developed so far in this area. In real-life, his work will have applications in analyzing financial risks, modeling in time of crisis (financial crisis, oil volatility, government transition, etc), or even in sales modeling during stiff competition.

Sincerely Yours,

Dean/Adviser

LETTER OF RECOMMENDATION

May 19, 2010

ENGR. ERMIE M. BACARRA
Chief, HRIDD, PCASTRD,
Department of Science and Technology

Dear Engr. Bacarra,

My warmest greetings to you.

This is to recommend Mr. Wendell Campano on his application for scholarship from your institution.

Mr Campano has been my student in several classes in his MS Statistics program and I can easily say that is one the top students not only in my classes but in others as well. He has the needed qualifications in terms of analytical and mathematical skills to finish a doctorate program in Statistics. He also has initiative, independence, and perseverance which are essential in pursuing a doctorate degree.

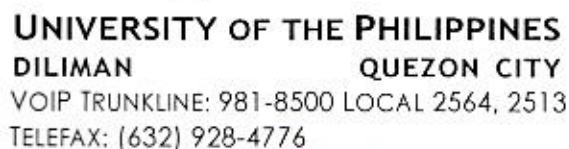

Being a PCASTRD scholar myself, I am confident that Mr. Campano, with the help of the applied-for scholarship, will not only finish his PhD program, but also serve his country adequately after he gets the degree.

Thank you very much.

Sincerely yours,
